When a woman can plan her family, she can plan her life. She can pursue more education, seek and keep better jobs, and contribute more to her family, her nation and to global prosperity. As she becomes better-off financially, her children receive better education, and the benefits carry over well into future generations.

- Dr. Natalia Kanem, Executive Director of the United Nations Population Fund.

World Population Day

July 11th

FAMILY PLANNING IS A HUMAN RIGHT

Every year on 11 July, World Population Day seeks to focus attention on the urgency and importance of population issues. The theme of World Population Day 2018 is: “Family Planning is a Human Right”, as this year marks the 50th anniversary of the 1968 International Conference on Human Rights, where family planning was, for the first time, globally affirmed to be a human right. The conference’s outcome document, known as the Teheran Proclamation, stated unequivocally: “Parents have a basic human right to determine freely and responsibly the number and spacing of their children.”

Embedded in this legislative language was a game-changing realization: Women and girls have the right to avoid the exhaustion, depletion and danger of too many pregnancies, too close together. Men and women have the right to choose when and how often to embrace parenthood — if at all. Every individual has the human right to determine the direction and scope of his or her future in this fundamental way.

Family Planning is, therefore, inextricably linked to sexual and reproductive health, gender equality and women's empowerment, as well as a key factor in reducing poverty.

WHEN PEOPLE ENJOY THEIR RIGHT TO FAMILY PLANNING...

The right to family planning permits the enjoyment of other rights, including the rights to health, education, and the achievement of a life with dignity. Some of these benefits include:

- Enabling women to space their births, benefiting both mothers' and children's health. Women who have fewer risky births, healthier pregnancies and safer deliveries face lower risks of death and improved overall health. Their babies are born healthier and their children's health is better early in life.
- Overcoming poverty by allowing women to plan for the number of children they can provide for and the increased benefits of a healthier family and healthier population.
- The provision of male and female condoms reducing the rates of sexually transmitted infections worldwide. They offer protection from HIV infection and unintended pregnancy. Family planning services can also help HIV-positive women to avoid pregnancy if and when they wish to do so.

UNFPA is the United Nations reproductive health and rights agency. Our mission is to deliver a world where every pregnancy is wanted, every childbirth is safe and every young person's potential is fulfilled.
